

20
YEARS

GLADSTEIN FAMILY
HUMAN RIGHTS INSTITUTE
AT UCONN

EVOLVING LANDSCAPES OF HUMAN RIGHTS:

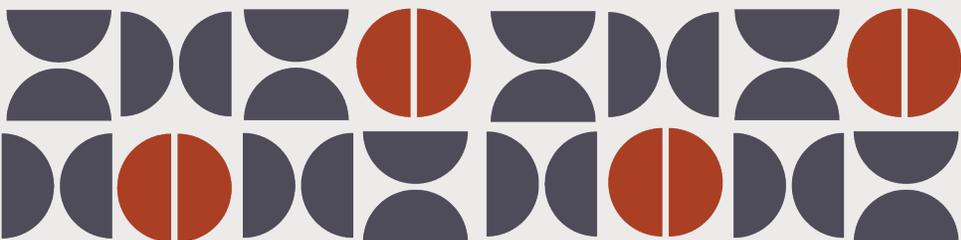

CELEBRATING 20 YEARS OF INTERDISCIPLINARITY & INNOVATION

MARCH 29 - MARCH 31, 2023

Gary Gladstein and his family have been integral to the growth and success of the Institute. Their passion, dedication, and support have laid the foundation for a University-wide program that supports inquiry into the most pressing human rights questions and prepares the next generation of human rights advocates. We are incredibly grateful for their vision and generosity.”

UConn President Radenka Maric

ABOUT THE CONFERENCE

The Human Rights Institute at the University of Connecticut was established in 2003. In recognition of the contributions of Gary Gladstein '66 (CLAS), '08 (HON) and his family, on February 22, 2023, it was named the Gladstein Family Human Rights Institute. This conference celebrates not only the Institute's anniversary, but also honors the Gladstein family. Convening more than 40 speakers over the course of three days, this international conference addresses themes central to the work of the Gladstein Institute's research and practice clusters, including:

- History and Future of War Crimes Prosecution
- Supply Chains Disrupted: The Social and Environmental Dimensions of Reform
- Russian Propaganda for War
- A Legacy Without Limits Film Screening and Discussion
- Global Health & the Right to Health: Critical Perspectives from Latin America
- The U.S. National Action Plan on Responsible Business Conduct
- Human Rights Measurement and Monitoring: Challenges and Methodological Approaches
- Transforming Human Rights Education for Contentious Times
- Memorialization, Transitional Justice, and Human Rights
- Humanitarian Narratives in the Global South
- Biomedical Technologies and Human Rights: Conceptual, Ethical and Legal Considerations

These panels cut distinct routes through the human rights terrain while remaining rooted in rigorous social science and humanities methods of inquiry. The discussions both reflect and celebrate the interdisciplinarity of the Gladstein Institute's research programs and the innovative scholarship that has emerged from two decades of hosting conferences, workshops, and invited speakers across these domains.

The Gladstein Family Human Rights Institute has provided a fruitful site to convene scholars, practitioners, and students across disciplines, instigating and supporting collaboration across conventional academic boundaries. Situated at the intersection of academic inquiry between the legal, social science, and humanities traditions, the University of Connecticut is a place where the promise and claims of human rights are interrogated through research into institutions and processes, both global and local. Human rights are not simply academic subjects, however, and we seek to inform and shape policy decisions through our work.

This conference will continue its tradition, drawing scholars and practitioners from around the world to renew ongoing conversations and to inspire new ones about the latest challenges in the field.

SCHEDULE

WEDNESDAY MARCH 29, 2023

10:00AM

Welcome and Opening Remarks

Konover Auditorium, The Dodd Center for Human Rights

10:15AM - 11:30AM

History and Future of War Crimes Prosecution

Konover Auditorium, The Dodd Center for Human Rights

The Russian invasion of Ukraine has precipitated a turning point in the international law of war crimes. In similar previous moments, new concepts and terms emerged to make sense of crimes and to prepare a path toward justice. “War crimes,” “crimes against humanity,” “genocide,” and “human rights” are examples of these earlier concepts. Recognizing the importance of historical context in establishing these precedents, what new concepts, what new language, can help make sense of crimes committed in twenty-first century warfare and contribute to securing justice?

Panelists

Predrag Dojčinović, Adjunct Professor and Research Affiliate, Gladstein Family Human Rights Institute, University of Connecticut

Emma Gilligan, Associate Professor of International Studies, Indiana University Bloomington

Peter Pomerantsev, Senior Fellow, Agora Institute, Johns Hopkins University Nathaniel A. Raymond, Executive

Nathaniel A. Raymond, Executive Director, Humanitarian Research Lab, Yale School of Public Health

Moderator: Sara Silverstein, Assistant Professor of History and Human Rights, University of Connecticut

11:45AM - 1:00PM

Supply Chains Disrupted: The Social and Environmental Dimensions of Reform

Konover Auditorium, The Dodd Center for Human Rights

Global supply chains have experienced multiple recent and high-profile shocks, driven in part by labor shortages and transportation snares spurred by the COVID-19 pandemic and by commodities shortfalls linked to the war in Ukraine. Beneath these disruptions are underlying problems including a lack of social protection floors for workers in multiple industries, and a lack of regulatory safeguards for new industries integral to contemporary supply networks (e.g., e-commerce and other elements of the digital economy). Panelists will explore problems and proposals for reform aimed at safeguarding the economic rights of workers while shoring up the social and environmental sustainability of global supply chains.

Panelists

Tola Moeun, Executive Director, Center for Alliance of Labor & Human Rights in Cambodia

Marina Colby, Senior Labor Advisor, U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID)

Mark Anner, Professor of Labor and Employment Relations, and Director of the Center for Global Workers' Rights, Penn State University

Judy Gearhart, Senior Researcher, American University School of International Service

Moderator: Shareen Hertel, Professor of Political Science and Human Rights, University of Connecticut

1:15PM - 2:30PM

Lunch

Student Union, Room 304

3:00PM - 4:00PM

Russian Propaganda for War

Konover Auditorium, The Dodd Center for Human Rights

What is the character and function of Russian propaganda for war, and what concrete effects does it have on Russian popular opinion on the war? Has social media changed the terrain and meant that states can no longer control information as much as before? Can propagandists, publishers, and media owners be held accountable under international law for inciting war crimes, crimes against humanity, or genocide? This panel brings together experts in Russian media and international law to examine the legal and political implications of war propaganda.

Speakers

Richard A. Wilson, Gladstein Distinguished Chair of Human Rights, Board of Trustees Distinguished Professor of Law and Anthropology, University of Connecticut

Peter Pomerantsev, Senior Fellow, Agora Institute, Johns Hopkins University

Predrag Dojčinović, Adjunct Professor and Research Affiliate, Gladstein Family Human Rights Institute, University of Connecticut

4:30PM - 5:30PM

A Legacy Without Limits Film Screening and Discussion

Konover Auditorium, The Dodd Center for Human Rights

A Legacy Without Limits celebrates the life and work of human rights scholar and advocate Wiktor Osiatyński, highlighting his key role in the founding and development of the Human Rights Institute at the University of Connecticut. Directed by UConn faculty member Catherine Masud, the film features interviews with Wiktor's family and friends, as well as colleagues at UConn, Open Society Foundations, the Central European University, and the Helsinki Foundation for Human Rights, each reflecting on the impact of Wiktor's legacy and what it means for human rights in our world today and in the future. For more information about the film, see pages 16-17.

Respondents

Ewa Woydyłło Osiatyńska, Doctor of Clinical Psychology, Certified Family Counselor, and Supervisor in Addiction Treatment

Natalia Osiatyńska, Strategic Writer and Brand Naming Consultant

Maciej Nowicki, President, Helsinki Foundation for Human Rights

Małgorzata Szuleka, Secretary of the Board, Helsinki Foundation for Human Rights

Gary Gladstein, Founder, Marsha Lilien Gladstein Foundation

Richard A. Wilson, Gladstein Distinguished Chair of Human Rights, Board of Trustees Distinguished Professor of Law and Anthropology, University of Connecticut

Moderator: Kathryn Libal, Director, Gladstein Family Human Rights Institute and Associate Professor, Social Work and Human Rights, University of Connecticut

For more information about the film, see pages 16-17.

SCHEDULE

THURSDAY MARCH 30, 2023

9:00AM - 10:15AM

Global Health & the Right to Health: Critical Perspectives from Latin America

Konover Auditorium, The Dodd Center for Human Rights

The intersection of Global Health and Human Rights has generated concepts, methods, and political debates, as well as legislation and programs. In official accounts, the importance of local activism, social movements, and regional trajectories in the history of global health and the right to health is often overshadowed by international organizations and foundations' universalizing narratives of what human rights are and how to measure progress. In this panel, leading scholars and activists from Latin America will challenge these top-down accounts by sharing incredible conceptual, methodological and political contributions of subaltern proposals from Latin America. Panelists will not only shed light on the regional specificities of their struggles, but also show how this region is at the forefront of challenging Western perspectives on the right to health, for instance by proposing novel decommodified and pluriversal perspectives on the social determination of the health-disease-treatment process, intercultural health, and healthcare systems.

Panelists

Mario Hernández-Álvarez, Coordinator of the Doctoral Program on Public Health, Universidad Nacional de Colombia

Alejandro Cerón-Valdes, Associate Professor and Chair, Department of Anthropology, University of Denver

Erika Arteaga-Cruz, Professor, San Francisco de Quito University

Moderator: César E. Abadía-Barrero, Associate Professor of Anthropology and Human Rights, University of Connecticut

10:30AM - 11:45AM

The U.S. National Action Plan on Responsible Business Conduct

Konover Auditorium, The Dodd Center for Human Rights

On June 16, 2021, U.S. Secretary of State Antony Blinken announced on behalf of the Biden-Harris Administration that the federal government would soon begin updating and revitalizing the United States' National Action Plan (NAP) on Responsible Business Conduct. Interested parties were provided the opportunity to submit written comments for federal government agencies to consider in developing the NAP. Submissions from business, civil society, and academia were followed by informal consultations between these groups and the government in 2022. The United States published its first NAP in December 2016, one of about 30 countries throughout the world to have done so. The panel will consider the role of NAPs and how the NAP could and should take forward the business and human rights agenda in the United States.

Panelists

Jena Martin, Robert L. Shuman Professor of Law and Ethics, West Virginia University

Eric Biel, Senior Advisor, Fair Labor Association; Adjunct Faculty, Georgetown Law

Jordyn Arndt, Foreign Affairs Officer, U.S. Department of State's Bureau of Democracy, Human Rights, and Labor

Moderator: Rachel Chambers, Assistant Professor of Business Law, University of Connecticut School of Business

12:00 PM - 1:15PM

Lunchtime Breakout Sessions

Student Union (SU) 304 A B C

LUNCHTIME BREAKOUT SESSIONS TOPICS/PRESENTERS

Engaging the Human Rights Archive at The Dodd Center for Human Rights, SU 304A

The Human Rights Collections within UConn Archives & Special Collections documents human rights and social justice struggles. This growing collection is a repository for materials invaluable to researchers and in the classroom. Presenters share insights into several collections related to war tribunals, genocide, children's labor rights, rights to housing, and more. Attendees have an opportunity to think about how histories of human rights can be examined within this growing collection.

Presenters:

Catherine Masud, Assistant Professor in Residence, Digital Media and Design and Human Rights, University of Connecticut; Director, A Legacy Without Limits

Predrag Dojčinović, Adjunct Professor and Research Affiliate, Gladstein Family Human Rights Institute, University of Connecticut

Fiona Vernal, Director of Engaged, Public, Oral, and Community Histories (EPOCH) and Associate Professor of History and Africana Studies, University of Connecticut

Alumni Experiences in the Human Rights Field, SU 304C

Human rights informs work in a range of professions. This breakout session draws upon the experiences of three UConn alum who share insights into how human rights matter in their work. Attendees will have a chance to engage the panelists and each other to discuss the diverse applications of human rights knowledge in practice at the community, state, national, or international levels.

Presenters:

Victor Schachter, Founder and President, The Foundation for Sustainable Rule of Law Initiatives

Jeff Smith, Founder and Director, Vanguard Africa; Producer, The Resistance Bureau

Johanna DeBari, Director of Workforce Equity and Training, Caring Health Center, Springfield, Massachusetts

Exploring a Human Rights-based Approach to Engineering, SU 304B

Engineering has profound implications for human societies, individuals, and the environment. Yet, the field's traditional focus on shaping the physical and natural world has frequently underemphasized the social impacts of engineering practice. Human rights offer a specific framework for managing harm prevention and enhancing the social benefits of engineering. This breakout session will discuss the "Engineering for Human Rights" paradigm and showcase ongoing research and teaching efforts in this area at the University of Connecticut. Attendees will also have the opportunity to engage in a case study discussing the application of engineering ethics and Human rights to engineering work.

Presenters:

Davis Chacon-Hurtado, Assistant Research Professor, Civil and Environmental Engineering and Human Rights, University of Connecticut

Shareen Hertel, Professor of Political Science and Human Rights, University of Connecticut

Genevieve Rigler, Ph.D. Student, Civil and Environmental Engineering, University of Connecticut

SCHEDULE

THURSDAY MARCH 30, 2023

1:30PM - 2:45PM

Human Rights Measurement and Monitoring: Challenges and Methodological Approaches

Konover Auditorium, The Dodd Center for Human Rights

In order to document and describe the extent of human rights conditions and abuses, advance our understanding of their causes and consequences, and inform policy and advocacy we must accurately and systematically observe and measure these phenomena. Because human rights abusers seek to obfuscate their actions and deny access to evidence, this is a tremendous challenge. The Human Rights Research and Data (HuRRD) Hub session brings together scholars working on cutting edge techniques to improve and expand the measurement of human rights fulfillment and violations, as well as the institutional and policy approaches to prevent or address them, around the world. Panelists will explain the key challenges to human rights measurement and observation that their research aims to address, introduce their innovative methodological approaches to meeting these challenges, and discuss how their data can be used in human rights research, policy, and advocacy. Panelist presentations will lead to an open format discussion to 1) elicit critical feedback on the projects from the audience, 2) make these innovative methodological advances in human rights research accessible to the audience, and 3) identify limitations in human rights measurement and the needs for innovation and future research to address these gaps.

Panelists

Rebecca Cordell, Assistant Professor of Political Science, University of Texas-Dallas

Chris Fariss, Assistant Professor of Political Science, University of Michigan

Kelebogile Zvobgo, Assistant Professor of Government, William & Mary; Founder and Director of the International Justice Lab

Skip Mark, Assistant Professor and Director, Center for Nonviolence & Peace Studies, University of Rhode Island

Moderator: Mike Rubin, Assistant Research Professor, Human Rights, Engineering and Business, and Director, Human Rights Research and Data Hub, University of Connecticut

3:00PM - 4:15PM

Transforming Human Rights Education for Contentious Times

Konover Auditorium, The Dodd Center for Human Rights

The Universal Declaration of Human Rights states that “every individual and every organ of society...shall strive by teaching and education to promote respect for these rights and freedoms” (1948). Since then, human rights education has evolved from a field that aims to raise awareness about respect for human rights to one through which a person or community has the potential to transform as a result of realizing human rights and one’s ability to influence positive social change. At the same time, scholars and practitioners have critiqued human rights and human rights education for privileging Western and Eurocentric contributions to the fields over non-Western knowledge, values, and perspectives. As a result, they have been engaged in the work of decolonizing human rights education. In this panel, leading human rights education scholars will draw on their decades of experience to reflect on the past and discuss how human rights education needs to continue to evolve at present to meet these contentious times. They will discuss how human rights education can address global challenges such as prejudice and discrimination, economic injustice, and the effects of the climate crisis, and examine how scholarship can inform practice to contend with the human rights challenges of today.

Panelists

Audrey Osler, Professor Emerita of Human Rights Education and Citizenship, University of Leeds

Michalinos Zembylas, Professor of Educational Theory and Curriculum Studies, Open University of Cyprus

André Keet, Research Chair for Critical Studies in Higher Education Transformation and Deputy Vice-Chancellor, Engagement and Transformation, Nelson Mandela University

Moderator: Sandra Sirota, Assistant Professor in Residence, Experiential Global Learning and Human Rights, University of Connecticut

4:30PM - 5:45PM

“Accountability and its Discontent – Between Hope and Despair,” Gladstein Visiting Professor Keynote

Address by Rashida Manjoo

Konover Auditorium, The Dodd Center for Human Rights

Rashida Manjoo, Former United Nations Special Rapporteur on Violence against Women, Its Causes and Consequences; Professor Emerita, University of Cape Town

SCHEDULE

FRIDAY MARCH 31, 2023

9:00AM - 10:15AM

Memorialization, Transitional Justice, and Human Rights

Konover Auditorium, The Dodd Center for Human Rights

The power of memorialization is widely recognized as a form of symbolic reparation aimed at redressing social injustices in the aftermath of mass violence. Yet its potential to activate the connection between repair and social transformation remains underutilized in contexts of transitional justice and international human rights law. This panel unites memorialization practitioners with experts in international human rights law to address how we can integrate memorial practices into multilayered strategies for justice and social reconciliation.

Panelists

Diego García-Sayán, Former President of the Inter-American Court of Human Rights

Sergio Beltrán-García, Assistant Researcher, Forensic Architecture

Jha D Amazi, Principal and Director of the Public Memory & Memorials Lab, MASS Design Group

Claret Vargas, Senior Staff Attorney, Center for Justice & Accountability

Moderator: Robin Greeley, Professor of Modern and Contemporary Latin American Art History, University of Connecticut

10:30AM - 11:45AM

Humanitarian Narratives in the Global South

Konover Auditorium, The Dodd Center for Human Rights

This panel will reassess the narrative conventions surrounding human rights and humanitarianism as well as the responses they are presumed to evoke in readers and publics. Can appeals to empathy with human suffering or stories of traumatized refugees and witnesses to mass crimes still have a lasting and substantial impact in enlisting public support for human rights? What role can literature play in identifying new narrative forms or alternative kinds of evidence, including historical evidence, to make sense of the current relationships between humanitarianism, human rights, and global economic inequality?

Panelists

Joseph R. Slaughter, Professor of English and Comparative Literature, and Executive Director, Institute for the Study of Human Rights, Columbia University

Yogita Goyal, Professor of English and African American Studies, University of California Los Angeles

Eleni Coundouriotis, Professor of English and Comparative Literary and Cultural Studies, University of Connecticut

Kerry Bystrom, Associate Dean, Bard College Berlin

Moderator: Sarah Winter, Professor of English and Comparative Literary and Cultural Studies, University of Connecticut

12:00PM - 1:15PM

Lunch

Wilbur Cross Reading Room

1:30PM - 2:45PM

Biomedical Technologies and Human Rights: Conceptual, Ethical and Legal Considerations

Konover Auditorium, The Dodd Center for Human Rights

Emerging biomedical technologies, such as genetic engineering but also applications of artificial intelligence in medicine and healthcare, provide exciting new opportunities for improving human health and well-being. At the same time, they may create substantial ethical and legal challenges and the rapid pace of innovation makes responsible governance of these technologies increasingly complex. In this panel, we shall highlight some of the most pressing ethical and legal concerns and discuss possible approaches to more adaptive governance and regulation.

Panelists

Fruzsina Molnar-Gabor, Professor of Law and BioQuant, Heidelberg Academy of Sciences

Molly Land, Professor of Law, University of Connecticut School of Law

Thomas Burri, Associate Professor of International and European Law, St. Gallen University, Switzerland

Moderator: Sebastian Wogenstein, Associate Professor of German Studies, University of Connecticut

3:00PM - 4:15PM

Closing Celebration and Reception

Dodd Center Foyer, The Dodd Center for Human Rights

8:00PM

Death and the Maiden, a co-production written by Ariel Dorfman, directed by Gary English
Connecticut Repertory Theatre, 802 Bolton Road, Storrs, CT 06269

Together with Connecticut Repertory Theatre, HRI co-sponsored the production of Death and the Maiden. Conference participants are invited to attend the production on Friday March 31, 2023. To purchase a ticket from the box office, visit Connecticut Repertory Theater's website: <https://crt.uconn.edu/>.

Death and the Maiden deals with the conflict between justice and reconciliation in the aftermath of human rights abuses. After a chance meeting with her alleged attacker, Paulina Salas demands justice for past crimes on a personal level, which illustrates the difficulty of victims living within the same country as those who committed atrocities.

Gary and Phyllis Gladstein (photo credit: Roger Castonguay)

THE GLADSTEIN LEGACY

On February 22, 2023, the University of Connecticut named the Gladstein Family Human Rights Institute in honor of alumnus Gary Gladstein '66 (CLAS), '08 (HON) and his family. This naming recognizes the Gladstein family for its stalwart support to human rights at UConn for a quarter of a century and for playing a pivotal role in founding one of the most dynamic, interdisciplinary academic human rights programs in the world.

Gary Gladstein was born in Waterbury and grew up in Bridgeport, Connecticut. He majored in economics at UConn, where he also met his late wife, Marsha Lilien, who was attending Eastern Connecticut State College. Following his studies at UConn, Gladstein earned an MBA at Columbia University. He built a long career in finance, serving for many years as a partner and the chief operating officer of Soros Fund Management. Gladstein also was an independent director of several public and private companies, including Mueller Industries, a New York Stock exchange company, where he has served for more than 25 years.

In the late 1990s, Gary Gladstein reached out to UConn's President Philip Austin and CLAS Dean Ross MacKinnon to seed programming on human rights. This initiative was innovative for its time since few interdisciplinary human rights programs existed in the country.

The Gladstein family's human rights legacy at UConn officially began in 1998 when Gary honored his late wife through a gift that endowed the Marsha Lilien Gladstein Visiting Professorship in Human Rights. He credited Marsha with sparking the family's interest in human rights. Her work as a kindergarten teacher in the Bridgeport, Connecticut school system and later, as a tutor for children with special needs, inspired the family to help create a novel, interdisciplinary human rights program at UConn. Gladstein's employment at Soros Fund Management, which shared office space with the Soros Foundations and the future Open Society Institute, also spurred his interest.

In 2001, Gladstein established the Human Rights Fund at UConn, followed by the Judi and Gary Gladstein Distinguished Chair in Human Rights, and the Gary and Phyllis Gladstein Fund for the Human Rights Institute. Recently, the family also generously contributed to the creation of the Wiktor Osiatyński Chair in Human Rights. Over the years, Gary and his family have given close to $11.6 million to support UConn, including $9.5 million to support human rights initiatives.

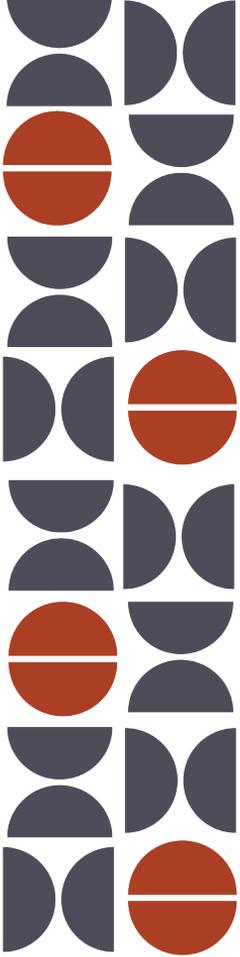

Committed to human rights awareness and understanding, Gladstein also has volunteered in multiple roles to support the Institute and the UConn Foundation. He served on the UConn Foundation Board from 1998 to 2008. Gary's wife, Dr. Phyllis Gladstein, has provided insights on programming related to human rights education. And, Gary's children, Jeffrey Gladstein and Mindy Grafstein, have become increasingly engaged over the years. Most recently, Gary and Mindy joined a new advisory board that advises the Dodd Human Rights Impact Programs, the public engagement and outreach arm of the Gladstein Institute.

The Gladstein family's support of the Institute has been transformative. Richard A. Wilson, the founding director of the Gladstein Family Human Rights Institute, Board of Trustees Distinguished Professor of Law and Anthropology, and Gladstein Distinguished Chair in Human Rights, said "UConn's Human Rights Institute has gained strength in the past 20 years, projecting a vision of an interdisciplinary approach that comprehends human rights in their historical, social, and political contexts. This success is due in no small part to the support of Gary Gladstein and his family. The naming of the Institute reflects the remarkable leadership role they have played." We are grateful for the family's engagement and support, which has laid the foundation for the Gladstein Family Human Rights Institute to thrive in perpetuity.

I am a proud alumnus of UConn and wanted to give back to the University that helped develop all aspects of my life. Respect for human rights has always been a major concern to me. With the increasing challenges facing our society, I saw my support as an opportunity to educate current and future generations about the importance of human rights.”

Gary Gladstein '66 (CLAS), '08 (HON)

HISTORY OF HUMAN RIGHTS AT UCONN

The Thomas J. Dodd Research Center was dedicated in 1995 by President William J. Clinton and Senator Christopher J. Dodd to honor Thomas Dodd's service as Executive Trial Counsel in the International Military Tribunal, the first of the Nuremberg War Crimes Trials. The establishment of The Dodd Center spurred a university-wide initiative to launch human rights studies at the University of Connecticut. A generous gift by Gary Gladstein '66 (CLAS), '08 (HON) and his family in 1998 allowed the University to establish the Marsha Lilien Gladstein Visiting Professorship in Human Rights. In Fall 2000, UConn hosted the first Gladstein Visiting Professor of Human Rights, Wiktor Osiatyński, an eminent constitutional and human rights scholar from Poland. Shortly thereafter UConn launched a minor in human rights and initiated a process to establish an interdisciplinary Human Rights Institute.

Founded in 2003, the Human Rights Institute has served as the intellectual hub of the University's human rights program. Richard A. Wilson, founding director and Gladstein Distinguished Chair of Human Rights and Board of Trustees Professor of Law and Anthropology, envisioned an interdisciplinary program predicated on university-wide engagement. Its growth and successes over the past twenty years have been based on the strength of university commitments to recognizing human rights as a priority. And, through the generous support of many donors, including Gary and Phyllis Gladstein and members of the Gladstein family as well as former Senator Christopher J. Dodd and Jackie Clegg, human rights studies at UConn has flourished.

The strengths and legacy of human rights education, research, and public engagement at UConn were highlighted in 2021 during the 25th anniversary of the Thomas J. Dodd Research Center, where the Institute is housed. On October 15, President Joe Biden and the Connecticut congressional delegation attended a ceremony to dedicate and rename the building "The Dodd Center for Human Rights," honoring the legacies of both Thomas J. and Christopher J. Dodd. The University also launched Dodd Human Rights Impact Programs, bringing together the outreach and engagement work of the Dodd Center with the academic programs of the Human Rights Institute. Within HRI, Dodd Impact serves as the external programming arm of human rights at UConn, weaving the interdisciplinary academic programs with action and practice.

In 2023, we are celebrating the Human Rights Institute's 20th anniversary. Recognizing this important milestone and the extraordinary contributions of the Gladstein family, the Institute was renamed the "Gladstein Family Human Rights Institute" by the UConn Board of Trustees on February 22nd of this year. Since the establishment of the first endowed fund for human rights in 1998, the Gladstein family has played a pivotal, transformative role in the Institute's development. Their generous support has provided robust funding for student scholarships, internships, study away programs, faculty and graduate student research, resident Scholars at Risk, conferences and workshops, and visits of scores of experts and practitioners to campus.

In its academic programs, the Gladstein Family Human Rights Institute fosters empirical, theoretical, and historical approaches to human rights teaching and research that subjects universal moral values and legal rights to rigorous scrutiny. Today the Gladstein Institute is a vibrant intellectual community, with 15 jointly appointed or core faculty members in 10 different departments, 3 post-doctoral fellows, and nearly 50 faculty members serving on the Gladstein Advisory Committee across the University. The Gladstein Institute, including its Dodd Impact Programs, has a number of programmatic and research clusters including:

- Arts and human rights (with the School of Fine Arts)
- Business and human rights initiative (with the School of Business)
- Democracy and dialogue initiative
- Economic and social rights
- Engineering for human rights (with the School of Engineering)
- History of human rights
- Holocaust and genocide
- Humanitarianism
- Human rights education in primary and secondary schools (with NEAG School of Education)
- Human rights film and digital media (with the Department of Digital Media and Design)
- Human rights research and data hub
- Global health and human rights

As a University-wide endeavor, the Gladstein Family Human Rights Institute advances human rights teaching across all University of Connecticut colleges and schools, pursuing novel and critical approaches to human rights scholarship and pedagogy. It is home to robust undergraduate and graduate programs, including a sizable minor (established in 2001); the first undergraduate major at a public research university (established in 2012); a University-wide graduate certificate program (launched in 2008); and master of arts degree (launched in 2021). Aiming to educate well-rounded scholars with an informed understanding of human rights, the Gladstein Institute promotes interdisciplinary scholarship and provides experiential learning for our students. Undergraduate and graduate programs provide education through courses taught by expert faculty from across UConn's College of Liberal Arts and Sciences and Schools of Business, Engineering, Law, Neag School of Education, Social Work, and Health Sciences.

CASA COMÚN/COMMUNAL HOUSE: A COLLECTIVE ART PIECE FROM VICTIMS OF VIOLENCE IN COLOMBIA

FEATURED EXHIBIT, THE DODD CENTER FOR HUMAN RIGHTS LOUNGE

Casa Común is an art archive from Colombia that confronts the atrocities of war and presents hopes for a peaceful future through the handcrafted work of victims. The 2016 peace accord between the Colombian government and the FARC-EP guerrilla put an end to 52 years of armed conflict. According to the Colombian truth commission, the war left over 8 million victims (Colombia's current population is 51.5 million people), including thousands of people who were tortured, kidnapped, or victims of sexual violence. Since 1985, 7.7 million were forcibly displaced and 450,664 people were killed.

One of the guiding principles included in the peace accord is Buen Vivir, an ancestral indigenous epistemology that speaks to the harmony between humans and nature. In this participatory action research and artistic project, two organizations of victims of the armed conflict in the state of Caquetá were invited to create a collective art piece. In sewing drums, the artists, primarily women, embroidered, painted, and used seeds to tell their stories of survival and their ideas for a future of Buen Vivir. In their art, any prospect of justice and hope remains forever entangled with war-related pains and memories. However, they also convey that community building, taking care of plants and animals, and the powers of medicinal plants allow survivors to find joy and solace.

Casa Común invites audiences to think that besides respecting rights, Buen Vivir can only happen if we care for whatever territories we happen to inhabit, and nurture plants, rivers, animals, and humans.

The Communal House welcomes all people from the conference. Please visit Casa Común in The Dodd Lounge at The Dodd Center for Human Rights.

Casa Común, photo credits: Camilo Ruiz

Past exhibit “From Civil Rights to Human Rights: African American and West Indian Housing Struggles in Hartford County 1940-2019,” photo credit: Defining Studios

HUMAN RIGHTS IN ACTION: MODELING ENGAGED PUBLIC, ORAL, AND COMMUNITY HISTORIES FEATURED EXHIBIT, THE DODD CENTER FOR HUMAN RIGHTS HALLWAY

This retrospective highlights eight years of collaborative intellectual inquiry between undergraduate students and Professor Fiona Vernal (History and Africana Studies). Central to these exhibitions are a deep commitment to using a human rights framework to explore a range of subjects, including the anti-apartheid movement, child labor and human rights, and the history of housing access and discrimination. These exhibitions highlight the rich collections of UConn Archives & Special Collections, including the U. Roberto (Robin) Romano Papers and the African National Congress Oral History Transcripts Collection, as well as our library databases. We thank the Gladstein Family Human Rights Institute, Office of Global Affairs, the Department of History, and the Africana Studies Institute, in particular, for seed funding to explore the possibilities of this approach for enriching the undergraduate humanities and human rights curriculum. We look forward to collaborating in the future to showcase undergraduates as co-creators of knowledge and to promote human rights research and action.

A LEGACY WITHOUT LIMITS

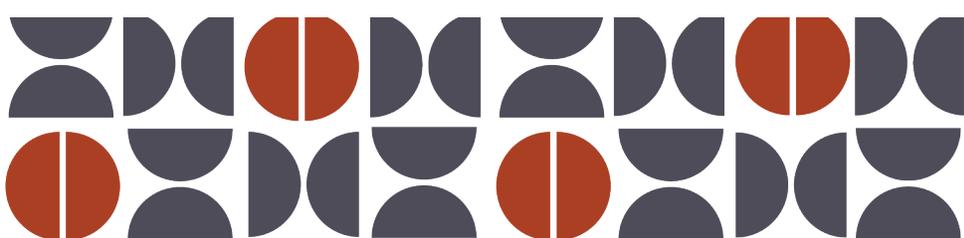

A FILM CELEBRATING THE LIFE OF WIKTOR OSIATYŃSKI

A Legacy Without Limits (2023, 24 minutes) offers a tribute to the life and work of human rights scholar and advocate Wiktor Osiatyński (1945-2017), highlighting his key role in the founding and development of the Gladstein Family Human Rights Institute at the University of Connecticut. Directed by UConn faculty member Catherine Masud, the film features interviews with Osiatyński's family and friends, as well as colleagues at UConn, Open Society Foundations, the Central European University, and the Helsinki Foundation for Human Rights, each reflecting on the impact of Osiatyński's legacy and what it means for human rights today and in the future.

Production credits: Director, Catherine Masud; Executive Producer, Kathryn Libal; Post Production Producer, Sahil Laul; Archival Producer, Alex Branzell; Camera, Catherine Masud, Sahil Laul, Laurel Pehmoeller; Editing, Catherine Masud, Sahil Laul

Film still, "A Legacy Without Limits"

Courtesy of Natalia Osiatynska

ABOUT WIKTOR OSIATYŃSKI

It is fitting for us to honor Wiktor Osiatyński and his legacy during our 20th anniversary year, given his pivotal role in the establishment and vision of the Gladstein Family Human Rights Institute. An internationally recognized lawyer, professor, and human rights advocate, Osiatyński was born in Białystok, Poland. He spent his boyhood in Warsaw, where in the 1950s dissidents were jailed for the slightest infraction under the oppressive postwar system. Osiatyński recalls, “Most unbearable for intellectuals was the lack of freedom of speech. The state’s monopoly over the media, along with the strictest kind of censorship, made it difficult for ordinary citizens to learn the truth, both about ‘the rest of the world’ and about Poland’s own history.”*

Osiatyński’s participation in the demonstrations of March 1968 marked an early point in his activism and interest in human rights, which grew in the wake of the 1975 Helsinki Agreement and the 1976 UN human rights covenants.

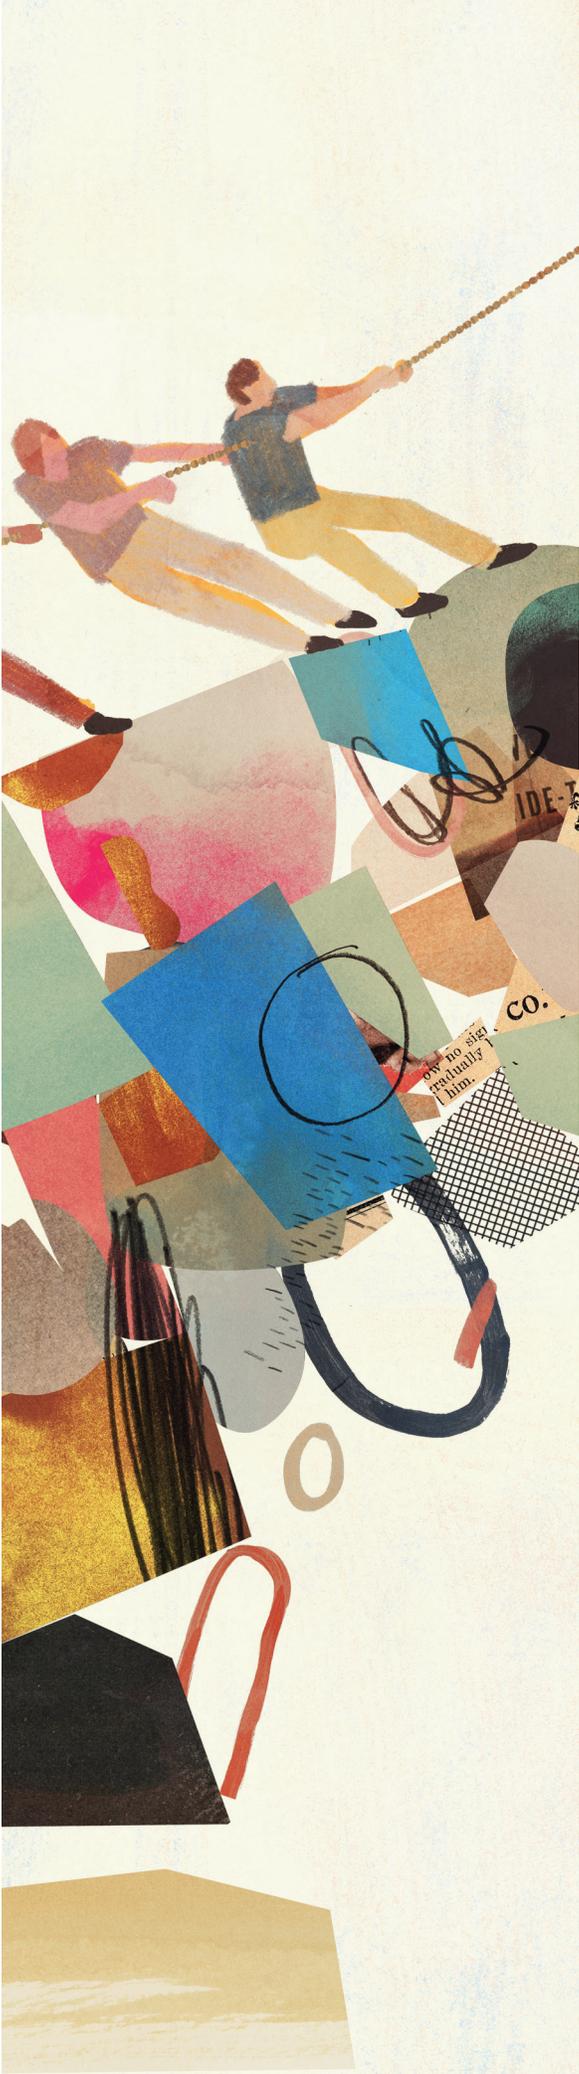

With the rise of the Solidarity Movement, human rights became an important part of dissident platforms in Eastern Europe. Osiatyński was engaged both as an activist and as a theoretician in this movement. Osiatyński advised on several constitutional committees and co-authored the draft of Poland’s Bill of Rights that President Lech Wałęsa presented to the Polish Parliament. He also wrote a number of provisions that became part of Poland’s new Constitution (1997).

Between 1991 and 1997, Osiatyński co-directed the Center for the Study of Constitutionalism in Eastern Europe at the University of Chicago Law School, and in 1995 he was appointed Professor in the Department of Legal Studies at the Central European University in Budapest. He was a long-standing board member of Open Society Foundations (OSF), the OSF Global Board, and the Open Society Justice Initiative.

In the late 1990s, Osiatyński formed close relationships with colleagues at the University of Connecticut, where he played a pivotal role in fostering the development of human rights programs and the founding of the Human Rights Institute. In October 2000, Osiatyński delivered the first lecture as the Marsha Lilien Gladstein Visiting Professor of Human Rights at UConn. On that day, he highlighted themes relevant two decades later, including the importance of developing programs “that not only talk about human rights in history, sociology, and political science, but really work on attitudes and how we [relate] to each other.” He returned annually to lecture and co-teach courses with UConn faculty and he served on HRI’s Board of Overseers.

*Wiktor Osiatyński, Human Rights and Their Limits (Cambridge, UK: Cambridge University Press, 2009), xi.

PARTICIPANT BIOS

César E. Abadía-Barrero

Jha D Amazi

Mark Anner

Jordyn Ardnt

Erika Arteaga-Cruz

Sergio Beltrán-García

Eric Biel

Thomas Burri

Kerry Bystrom

Alejandro Cerón-Valdes

Davis Chacon-Hurtado

Rachel Chambers

Marina Colby

Rebecca Cordell

Eleni Coundouriotis

Johanna DeBari

Predrag Dojčinović

Chris Fariss

Diego García-Sayán

Judy Gearhart

Emma Gilligan

Gary Gladstein

Yogita Goyal

Robin Greeley

Mario Hernández-Álvarez

Shareen Hertel

André Keet

Molly K. Land

Sahil Lau

Kathryn Libal

Rashida Manjoo

Skip Mark

Jena Martin

Catherine Masud

Tola Moeun

Fruzsina Molnar-Gabor

Maciej Nowicki

Ewa Woydyłło Osiatyńska

Natalia Osiatynska

Audrey Osler

Peter Pomerantsev

Nathaniel A. Raymond

Genevieve Rigler

Mike Rubin

Camilo Ruiz

Victor Schachter

Sara Silverstein

Sandra Sirota

Joseph R. Slaughter

Jeffrey Smith

Małgorzata Szuleka

Claret Vargas

Fiona Vernal

Richard A. Wilson

Sarah Winter

Sebastian Wogenstein

Michalinos Zembylas

Kelebogile Zvobgo

César E. Abadía-Barrero is Associate Professor of Anthropology and Human Rights at the University of Connecticut. He is a medical anthropologist whose research integrates different critical perspectives in the study of how for-profit interests transform access, continuity, and quality of health care. He has conducted activist-oriented research in Brazil and Colombia, focusing on health care policies and programs, human rights judicialization and advocacy, and social movements in health. Abadía-Barrero is the author of I Have AIDS but I am Happy: Children's Subjectivities, AIDS, and Social Responses in Brazil (2011, English and Portuguese editions) and Health in Ruins: The Capitalist Destruction of Medical Care (2022, English and Spanish editions). His current collaborative research follows decolonial proposals in health and wellbeing after Colombia's 2016 peace accord. Together with Sarah Willen, Abadía-Barrero co-directs the Global Health and Human Rights research cluster at UConn's Gladstein Family Human Rights Institute.

Jha D. Amazi is a Principal at MASS Design Group and the Director of the Public Memory and Memorials Lab (PMML). The PMML is an initiative that advances research, training, and built work around a central thesis: spatializing memory can heal us and inspire collective action for generations to come. Projects in the Lab's portfolio include the "Sugar Land 95 Cemetery Revitalization Project," "Harris County Remembrance Project," and several initiatives with the African American Cultural Heritage Action Fund (National Trust for Historic Preservation). Previously, Amazi worked as a designer at Sasaki Associates. She received her Bachelor of Science in architecture from Northeastern University and her Master of Architecture from the University of Pennsylvania.

Mark Anner is Professor of Labor and Employment Relations and Political Science at Penn State University. Anner is the founding director of Penn State University's Center for Global Workers' Rights and the master's program in Labor and Global Workers' Rights, which is part of the Global Labour University network. Anner holds a Ph.D. in government from Cornell University and a MA in Latin American studies from Stanford University. His field research has taken him to Central America, South Asia, and Vietnam. His published work includes Solidarity Transformed: Labor Responses to Globalization and Crisis in Latin America (Cornell University Press, 2011), "Squeezing workers' rights in global supply chains: Purchasing practices in the Bangladesh garment export sector in comparative perspective," (RIPE, 2020), and "Abandoning garment suppliers and workers during the COVID 19 pandemic," (ILRR, 2022). His current research examines labor governance mechanisms to address worker rights abuses in global supply chains.

Jordyn Arndt is a Foreign Affairs Officer in the U.S. Department of State's Bureau of Democracy, Human Rights, and Labor. Arndt leads the Bureau's efforts on the National Action Plan on Responsible Business Conduct, human rights and development finance, and the Business and Human Rights Treaty through bilateral and multilateral diplomacy, multi-stakeholder engagement, interagency coordination, and the development of guidance and training. Prior to this role, Arndt served as a Rosenthal Fellow at the U.S. Department of Labor, supporting policy and research to improve worker livelihoods across global supply chains, and as the government affairs manager at AmCham Singapore, supporting policy, research, and relationship development on doing business issues in Southeast Asia. Committed to women's economic empowerment, she studied women in garment manufacturing in Morocco as a Fulbright Scholar. Arndt received her MA from Johns Hopkins School of Advanced International Studies in international relations and economics and her BA from St. Catherine University in French, international business, and economics.

Erika Arteaga-Cruz is an Ecuadorian feminist physician, MD, and MPH. She co-coordinates the Ecosystem and Health circle of the People's Health Movement (PHM), a global network bringing together grassroots health activists, civil society organizations, and academic institutions from around the world. She has been an activist for the Right to Health for two decades and is part of the Latin-American Social Medicine Association (ALAMES) in Ecuador. Erika is an advisor for the Traditional Birth Attendants School "Unanchu Mama" from the Peasants Organizations Union (UNORCAC) in Cotacachi and part of the Ñawpa Magazine Editorial team, a magazine for plurinational, intercultural and socialist debate. Erika is a mother of two, a Professor at San Francisco de Quito University, and a Ph.D. (candidate) in Collective Health, Environment and Society at the Simón Bolívar Andean University. Her research focus is the resistance to the industrial medical complex by indigenous traditional birth attendants and indigenous health promoters.

Sergio Beltrán-García is Assistant Researcher for Forensic Architecture. An architect, activist, and researcher, Beltrán-García engages with aesthetic and political practices of transitional justice by using memory as an entry point. He has contributed to the development of fifteen memorials for distinct events of violence—both in contestation of and in collaboration with different levels of the Mexican government. These include memorials for the fatal 2008 police raid of New's Divine nightclub in Mexico City, the forced disappearance of 91 peasants during the 1970s Mexican Counterinsurgency, and currently, The Dispersed Memorial, an experimental, decentralized and self-managed network of memorials. Beltrán-García works closely with victims of human rights violations, advocates, and communities to mobilize critical theories coupled with advanced technologies and transdisciplinary research methods. A Chevening scholar, he completed postgraduate studies at Goldsmiths University of London, and now researches with Forensic Architecture. A member of the Memory Studies Association, he has received fellowships from the Aspen Institute, Bloomberg Philanthropies, and Monument Lab.

Eric Biel is Senior Advisor of the Fair Labor Association and an Adjunct Faculty member at Georgetown Law. He joined the Fair Labor Association (FLA) as a Senior Advisor in January 2018. Biel leads the organization's work on grievances/complaint investigations and engagement with the FLA's college/university affiliates and their licensees. Since 2009, he has taught a business and human rights course at Georgetown Law addressing issues of corporate accountability, trade and labor standards, and supply chain responsibility. During his five years as associate deputy undersecretary in the U.S. Department of Labor's Bureau of International Labor Affairs (ILAB) during the Obama Administration, Biel coordinated work on private sector engagement, supply chain issues, labor rights in numerous countries and under trade programs, and in various international organizations. From 2000 to 2011, Biel worked in several policy and legal positions outside of government. His previous government service from 1990 to 2000 included senior positions at the U.S. Department of Commerce; bipartisan Commission on Government Secrecy; and Senate Finance Committee. He has a BA from Johns Hopkins University and a joint JD-MPA from Yale Law School and Princeton University.

Thomas Burri is a Law Professor at the University of St. Gallen in Switzerland, specializing in international law and European law. The focus of his research in recent years has been on human rights and technology, including robotics, algorithms, and artificial intelligence (A.I.) He has more than a decade of experience with the ethics/law of technology. In recent times, he was invited to speak at Cambridge, Oxford, Princeton, and Stanford. His latest project is a public competition bearing on the EU's new A.I. legislation: "The First University of St. Gallen Grand Challenge: The EU A.I. Act 2023," with a prize of 100,000 CHF.

Kerry Bystrom is Associate Dean of the College and Associate Professor of English and Human Rights at Bard College Berlin, a liberal arts university. Bystrom taught previously at the University of Connecticut. Publications include Democracy at Home in South Africa, The Global South Atlantic (co-edited with Joseph Slaughter), and "Humanitarianism and Responsibility" (special issue of the Journal of Human Rights co-edited with Glenn Mitoma). Bystrom's current research explores the impacts of forced displacement on individuals and communities in Africa and more widely. Bystrom also works practically in the field of education in emergencies.

Alejandro Cerón-Valdes is Associate Professor and Chair of the Department of Anthropology, University of Denver. Cerón's research focuses on understanding the relationship between public health practice and health as a human right. He received an MD in 2000 and an MPH in 2006, both from Universidad de San Carlos de Guatemala, and a Ph.D. in anthropology from the University of Washington in 2013. Between 2001 and 2006, he worked in rural Guatemala as a physician and primary health project coordinator. He is the author of Epidemiología Neocolonial: Prácticas de Salud Pública y Derecho a la Salud en Guatemala (AVANCSO, 2018). In addition to his position at the University of Denver, he also collaborates in Guatemala with Instituto de Salud Incluyente (ISIS), Centro de Estudios para la Equidad y Gobernanza en los Sistemas de Salud (CEGSS), Fundación para el Niño Enfermo Renal (FUNDANIER), and Red de Acceso a Medicamentos de Guatemala (RedAM-GT).

Davis Chacon-Hurtado is Assistant Research Professor of Civil and Environmental Engineering and Human Rights at the University of Connecticut. He co-directs the Engineering for Human Rights Initiative, which is a collaboration between the UConn's Office of the Vice Provost for Research, the School of Engineering, and the Gladstein Family Human Rights Institute, promoting and advancing interdisciplinary research in engineering with a clear focus on societal outcomes. Chacon-Hurtado is working with a number of faculty on campus to develop research and curriculum at the intersection of human rights and engineering. He completed his Ph.D. in transportation and infrastructure systems at Purdue University. Chacon-Hurtado's research interests include transportation equity, environmental justice, human rights, and economic resilience. He grew up in Cusco, Peru, where he obtained his BS in civil engineering at the University of San Antonio Abad of Cusco. Chacon-Hurtado also earned an MSCE degree from the University of Puerto Rico at Mayagüez.

Rachel Chambers is Assistant Professor of Business Law at the University of Connecticut School of Business. Chambers' research centers on corporate accountability mechanisms. Her doctorate in law from the University of Essex (United Kingdom) considers the challenges of using extraterritorial solutions to address corporate human rights violations. Her current research includes comparative research on transnational tort litigation and analysis of the accountability potential of laws mandating human rights disclosure and due diligence by corporations. Chambers' background is in the practice of law as a Barrister (England and Wales). Chambers has worked as a consultant to major players in the business and human rights sphere, including the UN Global Compact and Amnesty International. Chambers is the co-director of the Teaching Business and Human Rights Forum.

Marina Colby currently serves as the Senior Labor Advisor at the U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID) where she leads agency and interagency efforts to elevate and advance labor rights issues across development programming and policies around the world. Previously, Colby served as a senior international relations officer in the U.S. Department of Labor's Bureau for International Labor Affairs, and as a democracy fellow and senior advisor on human trafficking at USAID. Colby has more than 20 years of policy and program management experience in the field of human rights and labor rights, with specialized expertise at the national and international level promoting the rights of women, children, and workers, including serving as the officer-in-charge of the International Labor Organization's Office in the United States.

Rebecca Cordell is Assistant Professor of Political Science in the School of Economic, Political and Policy Sciences at University of Texas at Dallas. Previously, she was a postdoctoral scholar in the School of Politics and Global Studies at Arizona State University. Cordell received her Ph.D. in political science from the University of Essex in 2017. Her research interests include state repression, political violence and human rights measurement. She specializes in computational methods with a focus on machine learning and text analysis. Cordell works on the Sub-national Analysis of Repression Project (SNARP). Her research is published or is forthcoming in International Studies Quarterly, Journal of Conflict Resolution, Journal of Peace Research, International Interactions, Journal of Human Rights, and International Area Studies Review. Cordell received the International Studies Association Human Rights Section's Steven C. Poe Best Graduate Student Paper Award in 2018.

Eleni Coundouriotis is Professor of English and Comparative Literary and Cultural Studies at the University of Connecticut. Her research focuses on the narration and documentation of war, humanitarianism, statelessness, and the history of anticolonial struggle. Coundouriotis has published widely on the aesthetics of realism and historical narration from the nineteenth century to contemporary postcolonial fiction. Her most recent book, Narrating Human Rights in Africa (2021), takes up multiple topics where literary texts have challenged human rights dogma: human dignity in the resistance to apartheid, the figure of the child soldier, the challenge of testifying about rape in war, how to evoke the disappeared body of the torture victim, the centrality of flight in the refugee and migrant experiences, and the long shadow of the "heart of darkness" motif in representations of Africa as a continent. Her current research focuses on representations of the hospital in contemporary postcolonial fiction depicting postconflict societies.

Johanna DeBari (she/her) serves as the Director of Workforce Equity and Training at Caring Health Center, in Springfield, Massachusetts. In addition to being an alum of the Gladstein Family Human Rights Institute's graduate certificate program, DeBari holds a bachelor's degree in sociology and Holocaust and genocide studies from Keene State College, and a master's degree in international studies, with a concentration in feminist studies from the University of Connecticut. She is passionate about creating space for everyone to learn and unlearn in community in pursuit of building a better world for everyone to have access to resources they need to succeed and thrive. She has a background as a survivor advocate, healing-centered educator, and restorative justice facilitator. She lives in northeastern Connecticut, with her daughter Islay, partner Jack, dog Simcoe, and two cats Citra and Galaxy.

Predrag Dojčinović is the author of Propaganda, War Crimes Trials and International Law: From Speakers' Corner to War Crimes (Routledge 2012) and Propaganda and International Criminal Law: From Cognition to Criminality (Routledge 2020). Dojčinović is an Adjunct Professor and Research Affiliate at the Gladstein Family Human Rights Institute at the University of Connecticut, who has lectured widely in Europe and the United States. From 1998 to 2017, Dojčinović has worked for the Office of the Prosecutor at the International Criminal Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia. Dojčinović has provided expertise in over twenty international war crimes trials, and serves as senior consultant and research advisor in the field of international criminal justice. In 2020, The Dodd Center for Human Rights at the University of Connecticut curated "The Predrag Dojčinović Collection: Ratko Mladić Genocidal Intent Documents" from the last trial held at the International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia between 2011 and 2017.

Christopher Fariss is Assistant Professor in the Department of Political Science and Faculty Associate in the Center for Political Studies at the University of Michigan. He graduated with a Ph.D. in political science from the University of California San Diego in June 2013. His research activity covers three primary themes: 1) human rights and the politics of violence, 2) the resources, structure, and power of the international system, and 3) the methods of measurement and research design.

Diego García-Sayán has served as Judge and, later, President, of the Inter-American Court of Human Rights (2004-2015). At the United Nations and the Organization of American States, his roles have included: Representative of the UN Secretary General for the Peace Agreements at El Salvador; Chairperson of the UN Working Group on Enforced or Involuntary Disappearances; Member of the Redesign Panel on the United Nations System of Administration of Justice, appointed by the UN Secretary General (2006). He has also served as Head of the OAS Electoral Mission in Guatemala (2007), and UN representative on the selection panel for members of Colombia's Transitional Justice system (JEP) and Truth Commission (CEV) following the 2016 Peace Agreements. García-Sayán was Minister of Justice during Peru's democratic transition (2000-2001), and as Peru's Minister of Foreign Affairs he proposed the OAS Inter-American Democratic Charter, adopted in 2001. Currently, he has just finished as Special Rapporteur of the United Nations on the Independence of Judges and Lawyers (2016-2022).

Judy Gearhart is a Senior Researcher at the Accountability Research Center (ARC) at American University's School of International Service where she leads ARC's programs on corporate accountability and workers' rights. Previously, she was the Executive Director of the International Labor Rights Forum (2011-2020), a leading policy advocacy organization in the US. She has developed worker rights training with trade unions, and for social auditors and factory managers in a dozen countries and has led multi-stakeholder negotiations for stronger supply chain compliance programs in multiple industries. Gearhart has worked for human rights advocacy NGOs in the United States and Mexico, for UNICEF and the International Labour Organization in Central America, and as an Adjunct Professor at Columbia University since 2001, co-teaching the class Human Rights and the Politics of Inequality. Her writing and public speaking has covered women's rights, trade policy, labor rights, and democracy.

Emma Gilligan is a Senior Policy Advisor, U.S. Department of State, and Associate Professor in the Department International Studies at Indiana University Bloomington. Gilligan is an expert on human rights, focusing on Eastern Europe, especially Russia and Ukraine, as well as Africa and Cambodia. As a former George F. Kennan fellow with the Kennan Institute at the Wilson Center, she focused her research on post-conflict justice in the aftermath of the two Chechen wars. Since 2020, Gilligan has served as a Senior Policy Advisor with the U.S. Department of State.

Gary Gladstein is an alumnus of the University of Connecticut's Class of '66 (CLAS) and '08 (HON). He was born in Waterbury and grew up in Bridgeport, Connecticut. He attended 8th and 9th grades while living on a Kibbutz in Israel. He met his future wife, Marsha Lilien, while at UConn. She passed away in 1995, spurring Gladstein's desire to create a human rights program in her memory. After completing his undergraduate degree in economics at UConn, he earned his master's in business administration from the Columbia University School of Business. He joined Sikorsky Aircraft as an economic analyst. And, in 1970 Gladstein moved to Arthur Young (now Ernst and Young) as a certified public accountant, working in the New Haven, Stamford and Hartford offices. In 1983, he joined Kohlberg, Kravis and Roberts as Chief Financial Officer in New York City. In 1985, Gladstein joined George Soros at Soros Fund Management as Chief Operating Officer; four years later, he became a Managing Partner and the Chief Operating Officer. Gladstein has been an independent director of several public and private companies, including Mueller Industries, a New York Stock exchange company, where he has served for over 25 years. Gary Gladstein is married to Dr. Phyllis Gladstein. He has 2 children, 6 step-children, and 19 grandchildren. Gary and Phyllis Gladstein reside in Florida and Connecticut.

Yogita Goyal is Professor of African American Studies and English at the University of California Los Angeles (UCLA) and the author of Romance, Diaspora, and Black Atlantic Literature (2010) and Runaway Genres: The Global Afterlives of Slavery (2019), which won the René Wellek Prize from ACLA, the Perkins Prize from the International Society for the Study of Narrative and Honorable Mention for the James Russell Lowell Prize from MLA. She is also the guest editor of a special issue of Research in African Literatures (2014), editor of the Cambridge Companion to Transnational American Literature (2017), and editor of the journal, Contemporary Literature (2015-2022). Past President of A.S.A.P., Goyal has published widely on African diaspora, postcolonial, and U.S. literature and is working on Aesthetics of Refuge, a monograph on twenty-first century refugee literature and culture.

Robin Greeley is Professor of Modern and Contemporary Latin American Art History and co-chair of the Arts and Human Rights Research Program at the Gladstein Family Human Rights Institute, University of Connecticut. A co-founder of the Symbolic Reparations Research Project (2015-2022), she writes extensively on art, politics, and human rights in Latin America, specializing in analyzing policies and practices of symbolic reparations for victims of human rights violations.

Mario Hernández-Álvarez is a physician, bioethicist, and doctor of history, and currently is Associate Professor at the Department of Public Health, Faculty of Medicine and Coordinator of Interdisciplinary Doctorate in Public Health, Universidad Nacional de Colombia. Hernández was head of the Health Science and Technology Program of Colciencias (1993-1994), General Coordinator of the Latin American Association of Social Medicine-ALAMES (2000-2001), Visiting Scholar of the Institute of Latin American Studies at the University of Texas at Austin (1999-2000), director of Planning and Systems of the Secretariat of Health of Bogotá (2004-2005), Secretary of Health of Bogotá in charge (2005), visiting researcher at the Oswaldo Cruz Foundation, Brazil (2008), and visiting professor at the Andean University Simon Bolívar (2010, 2017). He is a member of ALAMES Colombia, the People's Health Movement in Colombia, and leader of the research group Sociohistorical Studies of Health and Social Protection. His areas of interest are comparative history of health systems, history of medicine, right to health, and the social determination of health from a critical historical-territorial approach to health and life care.

Shareen Hertel is Professor of Political Science and Human Rights jointly appointed in the Department of Political Science and Gladstein Family Human Rights Institute at the University of Connecticut. An expert on economic rights as well as labor rights in global supply chains, Hertel has served as a consultant to foundations, nongovernmental organizations (NGOs), and United Nations agencies in the United States, Latin America, and South Asia. She is Editor of The Journal of Human Rights, serves on the editorial board of Human Rights Review, and is co-editor of the Routledge International Studies Intensives book series. Hertel holds a Ph.D. in political science and MA degrees in both political science and international affairs from Columbia University, and a BA in international studies from The College of Wooster (Ohio).

André Keet currently holds the Research Chair for Critical Studies in Higher Education Transformation and is the Deputy Vice-Chancellor for Engagement and Transformation at Nelson Mandela University, South Africa. He is a former visiting professor at the Centre for Race, Education and Decoloniality, Carnegie School of Education, Leeds Beckett University, U.K., and the 2018 Gladstein Visiting Professor of Human Rights at the University of Connecticut. Keet served as a director and deputy chief executive officer at the South African Human Rights Commission (SAHRC) and on the Commission for Gender Equality, before joining the university sector. Since entering the higher education field, Keet held professorial positions at the universities of Pretoria, Fort Hare, and Free State. He has been serving as transformation advisor and practitioner in various capacities in the higher education sector.

Molly K. Land is the Catherine Roraback Professor of Law and Human Rights at the University of Connecticut School of Law. Land's scholarship focuses on the intersection of human rights, science, and technology, and her most recent book, New Technologies for Human Rights Law and Practice (CUP 2018, ed. with Jay Aronson) provides an essential roadmap for understanding the relationship between technology and human rights law and practice. Land's articles have been published in the Yale, Harvard, Virginia, and Michigan journals of international law, among other places, and she speaks and lectures widely on the relationship between technology and human rights. Land has authored several human rights reports, including a report for the World Bank on the role of new technologies in promoting human rights. A former Fulbright Scholar at the University of Bonn, Land earned her JD at Yale Law School.

Sahil Laul served as a documentary filmmaker and digital media producer at the Gladstein Family Human Rights Institute, University of Connecticut. He most recently worked as a post producer and editor for the film, A Legacy Without Limits. He started working for the Gladstein Institute in April 2019 and has been involved in multiple multimedia projects, including coverage of the "Human Rights and Politics of Solidarity" conference and the "Abrahamic Traditions and Environmental Change" conference. He has been actively engaged with Dodd Human Rights Impact, contributing to films documenting the history of The Dodd Center for Human Rights and assisting with the course "Visual Storytelling Through Human Rights Archives." Laul is also a founder of Social Labs, a social impact incubator acting at the nexus of the arts, sciences, and humanities, where he is currently working on a solution to overcome challenges in the news/media landscape through a citizen journalism and digital archival platform. Laul holds degrees in molecular and cell biology and global health and minors in Spanish and anthropology from the University of Connecticut.

Kathryn Libal is the Director of the Gladstein Family Human Rights Institute, Interim Director of Dodd Human Rights Impact, and Associate Professor of Social Work and Human Rights at the University of Connecticut. Libal co-edited, with Shareen Hertel, Human Rights in the United States: Beyond Exceptionalism (2011) and authored, with Scott Harding, Human Rights-Based Approaches to Community Practice in the United States (2015). She also co-edited, with S. Megan Berthold, Refugees and Asylum Seekers: Interdisciplinary and Comparative Perspectives (2019) and most recently co-edited, with Molly Land and Jillian Chambers, Beyond Borders: The Human Rights of Noncitizens at Home and Abroad (2021). Libal serves on the editorial board of the Journal of Human Rights and Social Work and serves on the Steering Committee of Scholars at Risk USA Chapter. Libal received a BA in comparative religion from the Lewis and Clark College and an MA and Ph.D. in anthropology from the University of Washington.

Rashida Manjoo is the former United Nations Special Rapporteur on Violence against Women, its Causes and Consequences and is currently Professor Emerita at the University of Cape Town where she taught for many years in the Department of Public Law and also convened the LLM Human Rights Program. Manjoo continues to supervise Ph.D. candidates in the Faculty of Law. Manjoo has over four decades of experience in social justice and human rights work both in South Africa and abroad. Until July 2015, Manjoo held the position of United Nations Special Rapporteur on Violence against Women, its Causes and Consequences, a post Manjoo was appointed to in 2009 by the United Nations Human Rights Council. Her UN work over six years included monitoring and reporting on States' compliance in responding to and preventing violence against women, its causes, and consequences, both generally and in different country contexts. Manjoo has particularly highlighted the interaction of interpersonal, communal, institutional, and structural factors that negatively impact the interdependence and indivisibility of the human rights of women, and the challenges of the normative gap in international law on the issue of violence against women. Manjoo is the former Parliamentary Commissioner of the Commission on Gender Equality, an institution created by the Constitution of South Africa, with a mandate to oversee the promotion and protection of gender equality and women's rights. She has also been involved in social context training for judges and lawyers, where she has designed both content and methodology. She has authored several books, journal articles, book chapters and reports, including the co-edited books Women's Charters and Declarations: Building another World; The Legal Protection of Women from Violence - Normative Gaps in International Law; Criminal Justice and Accountability in Africa; and Violence against Women: Law, Policy, and Practice.

Skip Mark is Assistant Professor at the University of Rhode Island (URI). Mark is the director of the Center for Nonviolence and Peace Studies, a co-director of the CIRIGHTS data project, and currently serving as the Sylvia Chandley Peace Professor at URI. His research looks at the intersection of human rights, development, and conflict.

Jena Martin is the Robert L. Shuman Professor of Law & Ethics at West Virginia University. Martin's research is in the field of business and human rights, where she has written extensively on many issues, including the intersection of securities regulation and human rights. She is the author of several articles on these subjects, including "Hiding in the Light: The Misuse of Disclosure to Advance the Business and Human Rights Agenda" (Columbia University Journal of Transnational Law). Martin has also co-edited and co-authored a number of books in the field of securities regulation and business and human rights, including The Business and Human Rights Landscape: Moving Forward, Looking Back (Cambridge University Press); When the Levees Break: Re-visioning Regulation of the Securities Markets (Lexington Books), and Dying to be Heard: Businesses' Impact of Communities (Anthem Press). She has also presented her research at the United Nations.

Catherine Masud is Assistant Professor-in-Residence, jointly appointed by the Department of Digital Media and Design and the Gladstein Family Human Rights Institute at UConn. She is also an internationally award-winning filmmaker and spent much of her filmmaking career in South Asia. Thematically, many of her films address economic and social justice issues, war and genocide, and the conflict between religious and cultural identity. Masud has engaged in special documentary projects involving the University of Connecticut's Thomas J. Dodd Nuremberg Collections, the Armenian Memory Project, and, most recently, a documentary tribute to Wiktor Osiatyński, A Legacy Without Limits. She holds an MFA in film from the Vermont College of Fine Arts and a BA in development studies from Brown University.

Tola Moeun is the Executive Director, Center for Alliance of Labor & Human Rights in Cambodia. Moeun was born in 1974 in Pochentong, Phnom Penh. Moeun's family was forcibly moved by the Khmer Rouge to Battambang Province and his lifelong struggle for human rights is deeply informed by this early experience. Over a nearly four-decade career, Moeun has worked to deepen grassroots empowerment of workers and migrants first in partnership with nongovernmental organizations (NGOs) such as the Community Legal Education Center (CLEC) and since the early 2000s in the international trade union movement. He has also served as a compliance auditor. Since 2015, he has been director of the Center for the Alliance of Labor & Human Rights (CENTRAL) and has helped protect the rights and entitlements of well over 100,000 marginalized workers, building capacity and collective bargaining power. Moeun has faced direct threats as a result of his work and continues his advocacy despite the risks and in solidarity with allies globally.

Fruzsina Molnar-Gabor is Professor of Law, specifically, international medical and health law, and data protection law, at the University of Heidelberg. Molnár-Gábor received a doctorate in law from the University of Heidelberg and was research group leader at the Heidelberg Academy of Sciences and Humanities. She is on a number of international expert committees and scientific advisory boards such as the Ethics and Governance Committee of the Human Cell Atlas and the European Union's 1+ Million Genomes Initiative in the working group on ethical, legal, and social issues. She is a member of the European Group on Ethics in Science and New Technologies and a member of the Young Academy of the Berlin-Brandenburg Academy of Sciences and Humanities and the National Academy of Sciences Leopoldina. In 2020, Molnár-Gábor was awarded the Heinz Maier-Leibnitz Prize.

Maciej Nowicki is President of the Helsinki Foundation for Human Rights, Poland, one of Europe's leading human rights NGOs. Nowicki oversees its communications, research and advocacy activities. He is the co-founder and director of the International Film Festival WATCH DOCS: Human Rights in Film in Warsaw, one of the world's largest human rights film festivals. The annual festival reaches nearly 150,000 viewers annually through its annual festival in Warsaw, its traveling festival to nearly 40 Polish localities, and WATCH DOCS on-line. Nowicki is the creator and coordinator of the FUTURE DOCS European platform for creative encounters of human rights defenders and documentary filmmakers. He is also co-founder of the Social Institute of Film foundation and serves as its President of the Board. Nowicki is a trainer, juror, and panelist at numerous international film festivals, including IFF Rotterdam, Venice FF, Berlinale, One World Prague, and Docudays UA in Kiev.

Ewa Woydyłło Osiatyńska was the wife of Human Rights Institute co-developer and Visiting Professor Wiktor Osiatyński (1945–2017). She lives in Warsaw and pursues a career as psychotherapist, writer, and educator in a broad range of disciplines related to mental health, quality of life, and self-actualization. She is the author of over twenty acclaimed books aimed at the general audience, as well as numerous magazine articles. Osiatyńska appears frequently in the media supporting access to mental healthcare and advocating for the rule of law in individual and social relations. She is on the board of both the Helsinki Foundation for Human Rights and the Atypowi Foundation, which has collaborated with Warsaw's SWPS University to create the first academic program in Europe devoted to neurodiversity in the workplace. In the 1980s and 1990s Ewa and Wiktor helped bring AA-based twelve-step addiction treatment to Poland and the CEE region.

Natalia Osiatynska is a strategic writer and brand naming consultant. She is the daughter of Wiktor Osiatyński, who played a pivotal role in the founding and development of the Human Rights Institute at the University of Connecticut. Raised in Poland and the United States, Osiatynska grew up a bi-cultural witness to her father's achievements in academia and human rights advocacy. She holds a BA in drama from Colorado College and an MA in linguistics from Syracuse University. Osiatynska is self-employed as a bilingual business writer and brand naming consultant. Her clients include tech startups, natural skincare companies, NGOs, filmmakers, and media houses. On her multi-themed blog, osiatynska.com, she deploys her strategic communication skills to combine a range of writing styles with original photography. She lives in Warsaw, Poland, with her son, Anker, age twelve.

Audrey Osler is Professor Emerita of Human Rights Education and Citizenship at the University of Leeds researching human rights, social justice, and democratic citizenship education policy and practice in established democracies and post-conflict societies. Osler is founding Editor of the open access scholarly journal Human Rights Education Review. She has a long-standing interest in the place of narrative and life history in education research and practice and her Ph.D. (published as The Education and Careers of Black Teachers - 1997, Open University Press) examined the contribution of minority teachers to transformative education. Osler has held professorships and visiting professorships at universities in the United States (University of Washington, Utah State University) and Europe. She is founding director of the Centre for Citizenship and Human Rights Education at the University of Leeds, where she is Professor Emerita. She is currently working at the University of South-Eastern Norway. Osler has published over 120 scientific articles and 18 books.

Peter Pomerantsev is a Senior Fellow at the Agora Institute at Johns Hopkins University, and at the Institute of Global Affairs at the London School of Economics where he co-directs the Arena Initiative, a research project dedicated to overcoming the challenges of digital era disinformation and polarization. Pomerantsev has testified on the challenges of the information war to the U.S. House Foreign Affairs Committee, U.S. Senate Foreign Relations Committee and the U.K. Parliament Defense Select Committee. An author and TV producer, he writes for a wide range of publications, including the American Interest, the New York Times, The Atlantic, Politico, Granta, the Financial Times, and the London Review of Books. Pomerantsev's first book, Nothing is True and Everything is Possible, won the 2016 Royal Society of Literature Ondaatje Prize. His latest book is This is Not Propaganda: Adventures in the War Against Reality.

Nathaniel A. Raymond is the Executive Director of the Humanitarian Research Lab (HRL) at the Yale School of Public Health (YSPH). Raymond also leads HRL's work as part of the State Department's Conflict Observatory documenting alleged war crimes committed during the current conflict in Ukraine. He is a lecturer in epidemiology at YSPH and formerly a lecturer in global affairs at Yale's Jackson School. Raymond was formerly the founding director of the Signal Program on Human Security and Technology at the Harvard Humanitarian Initiative. He is a humanitarian aid worker and human rights investigator with nearly 25 years of experience, including field work in Afghanistan, Ethiopia, South Sudan, Sri Lanka, and elsewhere. Raymond has served as an expert advisor to UN Peacekeeping, U.S. Naval War College, UNHCR, UN OCHA, UN OHCHR, USAID, ASEAN, and multiple other organizations. His scholarly work has been published in Nature, The Lancet, and other journals.

Genevieve Rigler is a Ph.D. student in civil and environmental engineering and the first student fellow for the Engineering for Human Rights Initiative. Rigler works for the Gladstein Family Human Rights Institute under the Engineering for Human Rights Initiative and at the Eversource Energy Center with Davis Chacon-Hurtado and Shareen Hertel. She is a Dwight David Eisenhower Transportation Fellow (2022-2023), investigating the socio-economic impacts of historic infrastructure and development policies on housing, transportation, and health outcomes. Rigler received her Master of Science in Environmental Engineering from UConn, focused on a Citizen Science Initiative based in the Blue Nile Basin, Ethiopia. Under this NSF PIRE project that was targeting food and water security, Rigler interned at the International Food Policy Research Institute in Washington D.C. and published a framework to show how participation in science could build social and technical capacity and contribute to Sustainable Development Goals.

Mike Rubin is Assistant Research Professor at the University of Connecticut, holding a joint position between the Gladstein Family Human Rights Institute and the Schools of Engineering and Business. Rubin also directs the Institute's Human Rights Research and DataHub. Rubin's research investigates armed conflict processes and political violence, informing practical solutions to reduce the suffering they generate. His work draws upon methods for quantitative data analysis and fieldwork in conflict-affected regions, most recently in the Philippines. Rubin's research has been published in the Journal of Conflict Resolution and International Studies Quarterly and has been funded by the National Science Foundation (NSF), Institute for the Study of Human Rights at Columbia University, Weatherhead East Asia Institute, Earth Institute, and Center for Israel Education. Rubin earned a Ph.D. in political science at Columbia University, specializing in international relations and comparative politics. Prior to coming to UConn, he was a postdoctoral scholar at the Center for Peace and Security Studies (CPASS), University of California San Diego.

Camilo Ruiz is Assistant Professor in Anthropology at the University of Connecticut. Ruiz has more than fifteen years of experience in ethnographic and anthropological work in Colombia and the United States. Utilizing the combined strengths of community-based participatory research (CBPR), anthropology, public health, and the arts, Ruiz's work aims to better understand health inequities in urban and rural communities. Currently, Ruiz is building a CBPR inter-institutional laboratory in Hartford that will invite local communities to conduct critical and applied research. For Casa Común, Ruiz worked closely with the community artists, victims of the Colombian armed conflict, to conceptualize and create the art piece that will be exhibited at the Gladstein Family Human Rights Institute for its 20th anniversary.

Victor Schachter is the Founder and President of The Foundation for Sustainable Rule of Law Initiatives (FSRI), an NGO dedicated to establishing sustainable mediation centers globally to achieve timely, fair and peaceful conflict resolution in countries with backlogged court systems. Schachter has served as a mediator and advocate representing clients in mediations and arbitrations over 50 years. Additionally, he has led rule of law and related educational initiatives promoting judicial reform, alternative dispute resolution, and judicial case management in India, Brazil, Liberia, Bulgaria, Croatia, the Republic of Georgia, Turkey, Vietnam, and Malaysia, among other countries. Schachter has been honored as a California Lawyer Attorney of the Year for his service in judicial reform, rule of law, and mediation building. In October 2020, he received the Mediator of the Year Award from The Mediation Society of San Francisco. Previously, Schachter was a litigation partner at Fenwick & West LLP in Silicon Valley, California for 17 years.

Sara Silverstein is Assistant Professor at the University of Connecticut, jointly appointed in the Department of History and the Gladstein Family Human Rights Institute, and co-director of the Gladstein Institute's Research Program on Humanitarianism. Silverstein's work addresses the history of internationalism, public and global health, refugees and migration, statelessness, and minority rights, with a geographic concentration in Modern and Eastern Europe. She is completing a book manuscript titled For Your Health and Ours: The East European History of a Universal Right and has published on the history of internationalism, public and international health, the right to health, rights for refugees, and state-building and democracy in post-imperial Eastern Europe. She has been a postdoctoral research associate at the Yale Jackson Institute for Global Affairs, a Fox Fellow at Sciences Po, Paris, and a junior visiting fellow at the Institute for Human Sciences in Vienna.

Sandra Sirota is Assistant Professor in Residence in Human Rights and Experiential Global Learning with the Gladstein Family Human Rights Institute and Director of Dodd Impact's human rights education and civic action program, Human Rights Close to Home, at the University of Connecticut. Sirota's work explores human rights and social justice education in formal and non-formal settings in the United States and South Africa. Sirota's current research, funded by the Gladstein Family Human Rights Institute, focuses on how youth-led social movements may disrupt systemic racism in education and she is developing a new research project in conjunction with the launch of Human Rights Close to Home. Sirota's recent articles have been published in Comparative Education Review, the Journal of Human Rights, and the International Journal of Human Rights Education. Additionally, she serves as Book Review Co-Editor for The Journal of Human Rights and Faculty Coordinator for UConn's Early College Experience in Human Rights.

Joseph R. Slaughter is Professor of English and Comparative Literature, and the Executive Director of the Institute for the Study of Human Rights at Columbia University. Slaughter teaches postcolonial literature and theory, cultural studies, human rights, and literary approaches to international law in the Department of English and Comparative Literature at Columbia University. He has published numerous articles on African and Latin American literatures, human rights, and intellectual property. His book Human Rights, Inc: The World Novel, Narrative Form, and International Law, won the 2008 René Wellek Prize for Comparative Literature and Cultural Theory. He co-edited a volume of essays on Latin American, Caribbean, and African literatures and culture entitled The Global South Atlantic (2017), and is currently finishing two books: New World Orders, on intellectual/cultural property and world literature, and Pathetic Fallacies, a collection of essays on human rights and the humanities. Slaughter was a founding co-editor of the interdisciplinary journal Humanity, and he was recently appointed Executive Director of the Institute for the Study of Human Rights at Columbia University.

Jeffrey Smith is the Founder and Director of Vanguard Africa, a nonprofit organization that partners with pro-democracy leaders across Africa to build campaigns for ethical leadership and free and fair elections. Smith is also the co-creator and producer of The Resistance Bureau, a live-format program that spotlights the leaders at the forefront of the global struggle for democracy and human freedom. He has written extensively on issues pertaining to democracy, human rights, and U.S. foreign policy for premier international publications, including the Washington Post, Foreign Policy, Foreign Affairs, TIME Magazine, and The Atlantic. He is often quoted, and his work is cited, by major media publications and has provided on-air analysis for the BBC, CNN, MSNBC, NPR, Voice of America, and Al Jazeera. Smith is a graduate of the University of Connecticut, where he also received a master's degree in international relations in 2007, and remains active in the campus community, including serving on the Gladstein Institute's Advisory Board.

Małgorzata Szuleka is Secretary of the Board at the Helsinki Foundation for Human Rights (HFHR) in Warsaw, Poland, one of the leading human rights NGOs in Europe. Since 2009, Szuleka has been one of the leading HFHR's lawyers and researchers, often partnering with the European Agency for Fundamental Rights on major research projects concerning children's rights, rights of victims of crimes, and access to justice. Additionally, Szuleka has published numerous briefs and reports about the current rule of law crisis in Poland, focused on the work of the judiciary in times of reform, and documenting attacks on judges and prosecutors. Her research and advocacy focuses on the independence of the judiciary, threats to the rule of law, democratic backsliding, and the shrinking civil society space. Szuleka is a member of the Warsaw Bar Association and serves on the boards of Foundation Action Democracy and Civil Liberties Union for Europe.

Claret Vargas is a Senior Staff Attorney at the Center for Justice and Accountability, focusing on civil litigation in U.S. federal courts against perpetrators of atrocities. Previously, Vargas served as Research Director at MSI Integrity, an NGO focused on global governance and business and human rights, as Director of Internationalization at Dejusticia (Colombia), and as Executive Director of the Human Rights Center at Stanford Law School. Her research and advocacy work include issues of climate-induced forced displacement in the Americas, advocacy before the Inter-American Human Rights System, Business and Human Rights, and the design of victim-focused effective mechanisms for the protection of human rights. Vargas holds a BA, MA and Ph.D. from Harvard University, and a JD from Harvard Law School. Prior to her work as a lawyer, she was a professor of Latin American literature focusing on violence, dictatorships, and indigenous rights movements in the Americas.

Fiona Vernal is the Director of Engaged Public, Oral, and Community Histories (EPOCH) and Associate Professor of History and Africana Studies at the University of Connecticut. Vernal's teaching and research center African, Caribbean, and African Diaspora histories. She curates a number of public-facing projects, all of which center oral history as part of its core methodology. Exhibits include: "From Civil Rights to Human Rights: African American, Puerto Rican, and West Indian Housing Struggles in Hartford County, Connecticut, 1940-2019"; "Child Labor and Human Rights in Africa: The Hidden Costs of Chocolate," and "Children of the Soil: Generations of South Africans under Apartheid." Her current book and digital humanities project, Hartford Bound, integrates oral histories, archival research, and GIS methodologies to offer new visual and spatial histories of race, ethnic belonging, community formation, and community succession. Vernal was awarded the University of Connecticut's Provost Award for Excellence in Community Engaged Scholarship in 2021.

Richard A. Wilson is a Board of Trustees Professor of Law and Anthropology, the Gladstein Chair of Human Rights and was the Founding Director of the Gladstein Family Human Rights Institute at the University of Connecticut. Wilson is a scholar of war crimes, crimes against humanity and international criminal tribunals and is the author or editor of 11 books and over 50 articles. Having received a BSc and Ph.D. from the London School of Economics and Political Science, Wilson has committed himself to engaged scholarship that advances civil rights and human rights in the United States and worldwide. He previously served as chair of the Connecticut State Advisory Committee of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights. In 2021, Wilson was appointed by the governor of the state of Connecticut to the Hate Crimes Advisory Council to examine new measures to combat hate crimes.

Sarah Winter is Professor of English and Comparative Literary and Cultural Studies at the University of Connecticut and co-directs the Research Program on Humanitarianism at the Gladstein Family Human Rights Institute. An interdisciplinary scholar of nineteenth-century British literature, human rights, and the history of law and the modern disciplines, Winter has published essays in the Routledge Companion to Literature and Human Rights; the MLA volume on Teaching Human Rights in Literary and Cultural Studies; and the Cambridge Companion to Literature and Human Rights. Her current book project focuses on the human rights narratives and activism that have emerged from the legal history of habeas corpus in the British Empire. Essays based on this project have appeared in recent edited collections, including The State of Nature: Histories of an Idea; Empire and Legal Thought: Ideas and Institutions from Antiquity to Modernity; and Fictional Discourse and the Law.

Sebastian Wogenstein is Associate Professor of German and Comparative Literature at the University of Connecticut, Co-director of the Connecticut/Baden-Württemberg Human Rights Research Consortium (HRRC), and a faculty associate of the Gladstein Family Human Rights Institute and the Center for Judaic Studies and Contemporary Jewish Life. Wogenstein's research focuses primarily on German Jewish literature, theater, and the intersection of literature and human rights. He is the author of Horizonte der Moderne: Tragödie und Judentum von Cohen bis Levinas (Horizons of Modernity: Tragedy and Judaism from Cohen to Levinas) and co-editor of two books, Globale Kulturen-Kulturen der Globalisierung (Global Cultures-Cultures of Globalization) and An Grenzen: Literarische Erkundungen (On Borders: Literary Explorations).

Michalinos Zembylas is Professor of Educational Theory and Curriculum Studies at the Open University of Cyprus, Honorary Professor at Nelson Mandela University, South Africa, and an Adjunct Professor at the University of South Australia. Zembylas has written extensively on emotion and affect in relation to social justice pedagogies, intercultural and peace education, human rights education, and citizenship education. His recent books include: Affect and the Rise of Right-wing Populism: Pedagogies for the Renewal of Democratic Education, and Higher Education Hauntologies: Living with Ghosts for a Justice-to-Come (co-edited with V. Bozalek, S. Motala and D. Hölscher). In 2016, Zembylas received the Distinguished Researcher Award in Social Sciences and Humanities from the Cyprus Research Promotion Foundation.

Kelebogile Zvobgo is Assistant Professor of Government at William & Mary, a faculty affiliate at the Global Research Institute, and founder and director of the International Justice Lab. Zvobgo's research engages questions in human rights, transitional justice, and international law and courts, and has been published in a number of peer-reviewed journals, including the International Studies Quarterly, Journal of Human Rights, and International Journal of Transitional Justice. It has also been featured in a variety of U.S. and international media, including newspapers, magazines, podcasts, and television. Zvobgo has won several awards for her work, including Best Paper in Human Rights from both the American Political Science Association and International Studies Association, and Best Dissertation in Human Rights from both the American Political Science Association and International Studies Association. She holds a Ph.D. in political science and international relations from the University of Southern California.

Acknowledgements

This conference has been generously supported by Gary and Phyllis Gladstein and the Gladstein family; Richard A. Wilson, Founding Director of the Human Rights Institute, Board of Trustees Distinguished Professor of Law and Anthropology, and the Gladstein Distinguished Chair of Human Rights; and the Office of Global Affairs.

About the Gladstein Family Human Rights Institute

The Gladstein Family Human Rights Institute, situated in the University of Connecticut's Office of Global Affairs and housed in The Dodd Center for Human Rights, advances human rights research, education, and public engagement. In 2020, Dodd Human Rights Impact joined the Gladstein Institute to leverage the synergies of UConn human rights programs and create one of the most dynamic interdisciplinary institutes anywhere in the world.

For more information about the conference visit:

<http://s.uconn.edu/hri-20>

HUMANRIGHTS.UCONN.EDU

20
YEARS

GLADSTEIN FAMILY
HUMAN RIGHTS INSTITUTE
AT UCONN

UCONN
GLOBAL

Cover art credit: Keith Negley, December 2022